"He livest" Asthedoctorspokethe man who but a few moment a before had been struck by a passing cable car and who was now lying prostrate to the year room of the corner drug store moved uneasily and slowly opened his eyes and looked wonderingly around him on the faces of the men who had carried hima way from the path of death. "Am I hurt?" he queried sequely, as he made an effort to move and then sunk back again, his face pale from the unusual pain,

"Yes," said the doctor, "Don't you re member you were trying to cross the street and did not see the car behind you? It's a wonder that you were not killed. We were going to take you direct to the hospital, but I thought when you came to you might with to go home. I think you can be moved now,"

A look of great anxiety came over the in-jured man's face.
"What time is 117" he asked.

"What time is it?" he asked.

The dector consulted his watch. "It is now," he said, "just 5 15,"

"Would at be any hatm," said the sufferer, with an expression of deep carnestness. "If I stayed here for an hour or so yet? I don't want to go home just now."

"But you would be mach better cared for there," replied the medical man, "and I don't see any reason why you should want to may here. Come, what difference does it make whether you get home now or an hour from now?"

"It makes a great difference," exclaimed

It makes a great difference," exclaimed the mun on the couch, with a look of intense "You may not know it, sir," he went on, his voice rising with the excitement, as he clutched the physician by the arm and winced visibly at the thought of what might be his fate, "but my wife is giving an afternoon ien, and I thought I would rather wait until it is over with."—Tom Masson, in Life.

He Knew His Business. 'You are the man!" he said as he leaned forward in the street car and pointed his finger to the complacent and self-satisfied looking passenger opposite—"you are the man who predicted last October that we would have a mild winter!"
"Yes, I slid," replied the man.
"But we had a terrible winter instead!"
"Yes,"

'And you are no prophet,"

Then why, sir-why did you make such a prediction."
"As a matter of business. I am in the people from running off to Florida to es-cape a hard winter."

"Oh, we shall have a long, hot summer and if you want any fly screens please call around. I'm going into that line for the segson?"—Detroit Fre Peress.

Twice Married in One Day. on Monday, when a couple whose bans had been published for the third time on Sunday week presented themselves at the altar to out a hitch, but the formality of signing the register had to be performed. The clergy-man scarpined the happy couple by an-nonneing that he had mistaken them for and married them in the names of another couple who had been "out-asked" only on the previous day. In order to set matters right, the party returned to the aitar, the ring was taken off and the ceremony was repealed. After the bonds of marriage had thus been secored with a double knot the bells pealed forth with extra heartiness, London Telegraph.
